MR. ROOSEVELT PRAISES M'KINLEY FATHER OF THE GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK STATE

Pays a Notable Tribute to the Martyred Man's Memory.

A BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

His Resuttful Life and Tregle Ending Pertrayed in Belitting and Touching Language.

Canton, Ohio, Jan. 27 .- President osevelt tonight participated in a notable tribute to the memory of the late President McKinley. He was the principal orator at a banquet given under the auspices of the Canton Republican league in commemoration of the birthplace of McKinley. Surrounded by friends, neighbors and business and political associates of the dead president, he pronounced a brilliant and eloquent eulogy upon the life and works of McKinley-a eulogy by many regarded as the most beautiful and heartelt tribute ever heard to the memory of the distinguished dead.

The material part of the banquet was not concluded until 10 o'clock. Judge Day, as toastmaster, introduced Pres-Roosevelt, spoke briefly, in par tion no crisis occurs sufficient to call out in marked manner the energies o the strongest leader, then of course the does not and can not know the existence of such a leader; and in consequence there are long periods in the history of every nation during which no man appears who leaves an indelible mark in history. If, on the other hand, the crisis is one so many sided as to call for the development and exercise of many distinct attributes, it may be that more than one man will appear in order that the re-quirements shall be fully met. In the revolution and in the period of con-structive statesmanship immediately following it, for our good fortune it be-fell us that the highest military and the mightiest civic attributes were embodied in Washington, and so in him we have one of the undying men of history—a great soldier, if possible, an even greater statesman, and, above al a public servant whose lofty and dis interested patriotism rendered his power and ability-alike on fought fields and in council chambers-of the most far-reaching service to the re-public. In the civil war the two functions were divided, and Lincoln and Grant will stand forevermore with their names inscribed on the honor roll of those who have deserved well of mankind by saving to humanity a precious heritage. In similar fashion Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson each stands as the foremost representative of the great movement of his generation, and their names symbolize to us their times and the hopes and aspirations of their times "It was given to President McKinley to take the foremost place in our polit ical life at a time when our country was brought face to face with prob-lems more momentous than any whose solution we have ever attempted, save only in the revolution and in the civil war, and it was under his leadership that the nation solved these mighty problems aright. Therefore he shall stand in the eyes of history not merely as the first man of his generation, but as among the greatest figures in our national life coming second only dence rose and cheered him enthusias-to the men of the two great crisis in which the Union was founded and pre-

"Finally, in the Philippines, the prof em was one of great complexity. There was an insurrectionary party claimin to represent the people of the island and putting forth their claim with a certain number of excellent men here at home, and which afforded yet to others a chance to arouse a factious party spirit against the president. that some strong power would have t step in and take possession. But though now it is easy to see that our duty was to stay in the islands, to put down the insurrection by force of arms, and then to establish freedom-giving civil gov-ernment, it needed a genuine statesnanship to see this and to act accord ngly at the time of the first revolt.

"A weaker and less farsighted n than President McKinley would have shrunk from a task very difficult in itself, and certain to furnish occasion for attack and misrepresentation no less than for honest misunderstanding But President McKinley never flinched He refused to consider the thought o abandoning our duty in our new pos sessions. While sedulously endeavoring to act with the utmost humanity to ward the insurrectionists, he never tered in the determination to put then down by force of arms, alike for the sake of our own interests and honor, and for the sake of the interests of the islanders, and particularly of the great number of friendly natives, including those most highly civilized, for whom abandonment by us would have meant ruin and death.

"Again his policy was most amply vindicated. Peace has come to the islands, together with a greater measure of individual liberty and self-government than they have ever beforenown. All the tasks set us as a re ult of the war with Spain have so far een well and honorably accomplish and as a result, this nation stands higher than ever before among the nations of mankind.

HIS SECOND CAMPAIGN.

"President McKinley's second campaign was fought mainly on the issue of approving what he had done in his first administration, and, specifically what he had done as regards these problems springing out of the war with Spain. The result was that the popular verdict in his favor was more over-whelming than it had been before. The brave, strong, gentle heart was stilled forver, and word was brought to the woman who wept that she was to walk benceforth in the shadow. The hideous afamy of the deed shocked the nation to its depths, for the man thus struck at was in a peculiar sense the cham pion of the plain people, in a peculiar sense the representative and the exponent of those ideals which, if we ive up to them, will make, as they blessed refuge for all who strive to de right and to live their lives simply and well, as light is given them. "Eight years before he was nomi-nated for president he was already conidered a precidential possibility. years before he was nominated only his own high sense of honor prevented his being made a formidable competitor f the chief upon whom the choice the convention then actually fell. In 1896 he was chosen because the great mass of his party knew him and be-lieved in him and regarded him as symbolizing their ideals, as representing their aspirations. In estimating the forces which brought about his nomina-tion and election I do not undervalue hat devoted personal friendship which he had the faculty to inspire in so marked a degree among the ablest and most influential leaders; this leadership was of immense consequence in bring-ing about the result; but, after all, the prime factor was the trust in and devotion to him felt by the great mass of men who had come to accept him as their recognized spokesman. In his nomination, the national convention or a great party carried into effect in good faith the deliberate judgment of that party as to who its candidate should

"But even as a candidate, President McKinley was far more than the can-didate of a party, and as president he was in the broadest and fullest sense the president of all the people, of all sections of the country. "His first nomination came to him be-ause of the qualities he had shown in healthy and open political leadership the leadership which by word and deed impresses itself as a virile force for good upon the people at large and which has nothing in common with mere intrigue or manipulation. 1896 the issue was fairly joined, chiefly upon a question which as a party ques tion was entirely new, so that the old lines of political cleavage were in large part abandoned. All other issues sand in importance when compared with the critical need of Reeping our financial system on the high and honorable plane imperatively demanded by our position as a great civilized power. As the champion of such a principle, President McKinley received the support not only of his own party, but of hundreds of thousands of those to whom he had been politically opposed. He triumphed, and he made good with scru fidelity the promses upon which the campaign was won "We were at the time in a period of great industrial depression, and it was promised for and on behalf of McKin-ley that if he were elected our financial system should not only be preserved unharmed, but improved, and our economic system shaped in accordance with those theories which have always marked our periods of greatest pros-perity. The promises were kept, and following their keeping came the pros perity which we now enjoy. All that was foretold concerning the well being which would follow the election of Mekinley has been justified by the event.
